The Common Man's Party

By Lia King

The Guardian Express

The Democratic Party's movers and shakers convened at the Riviera Hotel & Casino on Saturday, April 14, 2012, for the Clark County Democratic Convention. As I walked toward the swarm of busy attendees entering and exiting the main convention hive, I noticed an extremely loud buzz of its attendees' voices in the room's stratosphere. My initial instinct was to tune it out as the sound was chaotic and quite disturbing. Taking a moment to adjust, I let myself be drawn in by it instead. As I came into tantric unison with the hum of the many attendees' voices, I wondered what I would discover to be the group's collective mantra. What would be the most prominent cohesive ideal which brings such a diverse group of citizens together to be called the Clark County Democratic Caucus?

Jerry Sakura, Candidate, U.S. Congress, CD3, discussing Hillary Clinton with Beau Biden

Dr. Stephen Fry, Congressional Candidate, District 3

I came upon one of the convention attendees, Frank Slaughter. My question to this ex-Marine Corps soldier and father was simple. What did he consider to be the Democratic Party's single most important foundational goal? With a broad smile, he responded, "Basically, the Democratic party is for everybody. It is inclusive, not exclusive. The Democratic party means equality for everyone, especially the working class." After hearing Mr. Slaughter's very eloquent words in support of his party, I wondered if other attendees and candidates would share his view. Desiring to see if Mr. Slaughter's perception was also

Bank Robbery Crash and Run

By Collette Bender

The Guardian Express

A bank robber and his accomplice were apprehended Monday, minutes after robbing a bank at Craig Road and Jones Boulevard. Early Monday evening, an armed man entered the bank and demanded cash. After the robbery, the man fled in a Mercury Cougar with a getaway driver. A police helicopter, accompanied by several LVMPD units tailed the suspect for approximately five miles before the vehicle crashed into a fence in North Las Vegas and the suspects fled foot. Both were swiftly taken into custody. Witnesses at the bank are credited with identifying the getaway vehicle.

on the minds of the party's candidates, I sought out Felipe Rodriguez who is currently running for State Assembly for District 19. I presented the same question. Mr. Rodriguez responded, "We may have different personal beliefs. We may have different personal values here and there. But, at the end of the day, the Democratic Party's common goal or theme is the representation of the working class of America. It is the common man or the working class of America who has sustained this country and made this country into what it is today." Mr. Rodriguez' platform is one which supports the working class of Americans and their children.

He desires to bring jobs back to Nevadans and to oppose legislature that will rob our educational system of money necessary to support Nevada's teachers. Felipe Rodriguez can be found at <http://felipe4assembly.com>. I was already hearing a whisper of the party's mantra. I continued through the crowd and happened upon a gentleman named Michael Hopper. I was taken aback by his rather simple, yet articulate response to my question. Very seriously, without skipping a beat, Mr. Hopper responded, "Our mission is to improve this country." The United States Veteran continued, "I'm watching the war on women, the war on the underprivileged. I am watching the war on everyone who does not have a voice. These people here are united in providing a platform to give a voice to underprivileged and all those who are voiceless in fighting the oligarchy in corporate America that is ruining our country." Defying the victimization of the voiceless, Mr. Hopper's words reverberated through my head. His concern for the voiceless and underprivileged in America rang loud and clear.

Mr. Hopper then directed my attention and made a short introduction to the Nevada State Democratic Party Chair, Sam Lieberman, who had worked as the party's chair for two terms since 2009 and had a few words to say on the topic of the day. Mr. Lieberman spoke of the "diversity" of the political figures that is representative of the party. He commented that he believes that diversity within the party is necessary. "I think that all of these candidates represent the diversity that is our party and needs to be. I believe it is a combination of education and economy that will bring voters out to the polls regardless of the candidates' backgrounds." Mr. Lieberman can be found on Facebook at <http://www.facebook.com/people/Sam-Lieberman/648402342>.

One candidate who offers such diversity is Steven Brooks, currently jockeying for a re-election to the Nevada State Assembly, representing District 17. Steven Brooks also believes the main focal point for the Democratic Party is a platform built on remedying the country's education and unemployment issues: "We have to bring jobs back to the state of Nevada. In order to do that, we have to rectify our educational system. Our educational system is failing us and as a result, no businesses (See "Party" page 3)

The Guardian Express

It is our mission to provide a fair and honest format for the communication of stories, articles and commentary concerning issues of relevance to the Southern Nevada Community and to do so in a manner that is uplifting and non-discriminatory.

"Party" from page 2 or companies will relocate to the state of Nevada until we can fix that problem. We must dismantle Nevada's educational system as we know it and put it back together again in a format that is functioning appropriately. It is incumbent upon us in the State Legislature to make sure our teachers have the support that is necessary for them to excel in the classroom." Keep up with Mr. Brooks at <http://brooks4assembly.com>.

Congressional Candidate Dina Titus was my next interviewee. Addressing the great divide between what the Republicans and Democrats will bring to office, Ms. Titus wished to point out ... "regardless of the Democratic candidate, we are all here united behind basic Democratic principles which all stem down to making the economy better, and making it better for all people, not just for the few at the top." Discover more about Dina Titus' campaign at www.DinaTitus.com.

"At the top" is what one might consider Dr. Stephen Frye who is seeking a congressional election in District 3. On his website called 25 Reasons to Legalize Drugs at www.25reasons.org, Dr. Frye elaborates on the top 25 reasons he believes should warrant the legalization of drugs. When I posed the question of the day to Dr. Frye, he responded, "The single most important ambition of the Democratic Party is to re-elect Barack Obama to continue the amazing work he has done for this country's recovery from the catastrophe that George W. Bush left us in. George H. W. Bush left us in a grave depression. George W. Bush left us in a great recession. We were in dire, dire straits. The country is slowly recovering. Clinton created more jobs in eight years than what the Republicans created in twenty years during the Reagan and Bush administrations. We are the job machine."

DR. Frye for Nevada State Senate Candidate, District 3

The unanimous theme which presented itself at the Clark County Democratic Convention is one of hope for the people of Nevada. The Democratic Party speaks to the "common man" in us all ... the average, blue-collar, working-his-fingers-to-the-bone American. To summarize in one sentence: The Clark County Democratic Party is the party representing Nevada's working class, hoping to achieve security in employment and a strengthened economy for the entire Nevada populace ... even for its Republicans.

Two Lives Lost in Senior Center Shooting

By Isabelle Guzman
The Guardian Express

Ronald Wayne Mattox, 54, and his mother, Betty Jean Mattox, 78, were both victims of the shooting that took place at Bonanza Pines Senior Living Center near Bonanza Road and Lamb Boulevard on April 7th around 1:30p.m. Police have identified Roger T. Foley II, age 63, as the suspect. Foley was rapidly taken into custody and is currently being detained at the Clark County Detention Center. The shooting took place after an altercation between Foley and Mr. Mattox.

The first victim, R.W. Mattox died on the scene while his mother, B.J. Mattox, severely injured, was transported to University Medical Center where she passed away on Wednesday April 11th.

Foley called 911 after the shooting and held himself responsible for the event that took place. The suspect is related to the well-known legal family of the same name. Since one of Foley's relatives is working for the Clark County district attorney's office, the prosecution will be entrusted to another authority as the State Attorney General's office took over the case.

East Las Vegas Shooting Leaves Two Victims

By Isabelle Guzman
The Guardian Express

Two people were shot a little before 10p.m. on Sunday night in the Villas East apartment complex, located in the 5000 block of East Charleston Boulevard near South Nellis Boulevard. In addition to the apartment complex, police have determined there was a second crime scene and are investigating the 7-Eleven near Charleston and Lamb, where one of the persons involved in the shooting possibly went shortly after the event took place. At least one suspect has been taken into custody.

The exact extent of the injuries of the two victims is still not confirmed but one is known to have been transported to the hospital in critical condition.

No information has yet been released on the events leading to the shooting or the identity of any of the individuals involved. The Guardian Express will update this story as it develops and more information is made available.

Your Point Of View

The End of the First Wave

By Garth Baker

The Guardian Express

In the Detective Bureau we used a term called detective shopping. What this referred to was a person who called, thinking they were a victim and when they didn't get the answer they wanted, they would call again and talk to another detective in hopes they could get a different response. I see the same thing happening in the George Zimmerman case. I find it rather funny (like peculiar, not funny like haha), that no one can stand up and just make the decision to not charge Zimmerman. The charging of Zimmerman is just a sad case of justice being pushed to the public (jury) and the tax payers of Sanford, Florida. This will be a media, political and radical circus, just like the many high profile cases we have watched on day time television. This is not justice; this is the charging of a man who acted in self defense, to keep the radicals from rioting. "We did not come to this decision lightly," Ms. Corey said. She added: "Let me emphasize that we do not prosecute by public pressure or by petition. I say BS Ms. Corey. The only reason you didn't allow the grand jury to decide, is that you knew, Ms. Corey, that you couldn't control the Grand Jury's decision so you made it own your own."

This case is not a case that will be able to show intent or the unlawful killing. This case will however, show a man who was in fear of his life and had to result in self defense to prevent an attack. All that has been accomplished here is confusion on the part of the citizens of this country and when they can protect themselves when confronted with a violent attack.

Let's just hope that this confusion doesn't create such a confused state that citizens of this country start losing their lives when they could have protected themselves, but were to afraid of political, radical and extremist persecution.

If in fact, Mr. Zimmerman is acquitted or found not guilty, the second wave will be enacted by the radicals and extremists. The very thing they are attempting to stop from happening will come to a head and with more preparation.

The Second Amendment protects an individual's right to possess a firearm, unconnected to service in a militia and to use that firearm for traditionally lawful purposes, such as self-defense. Do we not follow The Constitution's Bill of Rights any longer?

Infosys Accused of Visa Fraud

By Albert Angulo

The Guardian Express

We've all had this happen: you call an American company's 800 number for help, and end up talking to someone in a foreign country. It's called outsourcing. American firms do it because foreign labor can be cheaper. But now, one company is being accused of bringing those lower-paid workers to the U.S. illegally and that may be costing Americans jobs.

The allegations are the subject of a federal probe into a giant Indian information technology firm called Infosys. Infosys Limited was started in 1981 by seven people with $250. Today, they are a global leader in information technology and consulting, with revenues of $6.825 billion. The charges are coming from inside the company, from an employee, Jay Palmer, who has never spoken publicly before. Palmer, a principal consultant at Infosys is the whistleblower whose charges sparked the federal investigation. Palmer claims that Infosys, the global high-tech giant, engaged in a systematic practice of visa fraud, a charge the company denies. Palmer said the first thing to catch his attention was an employee who had been in the U.S. from India several times before. "He came up to me and he was literally in tears," Palmer said. "He told me he was over here illegally and he didn't want to be here.

He was worried that he would get caught." Palmer says he began digging into how and why Infosys seemed to be bringing large numbers of workers from its corporate headquarters in Bangalore, India, into the U.S. Palmer says at first, most came over on H-1B visas, visas for people with specialized talents or a level of technical ability that can't be found among American workers. When asked if all the people had some special expertise that couldn't be found in the U.S., Palmer said, "Absolutely not. Not even close. Many of them is what we call freshers. People that would just come over, whoever they could get to come over. Whoever got accepted for a visa." Many of the people brought in, in fact, didn't know what they were doing at all, Palmer said. "There was not a project or program that I was involved in that we did not remove somebody because they had no knowledge of what they were doing," he said. So then what's the motive for bringing them in? You could hire an American who is trained in that particular discipline and do better. Palmer said, "It's purely profit." Palmer says the Indian workers on his team were paid substantially less than an American would have made in the same job. When the U.S. State Department began to limit the number of H-1B visas, Palmer says Infosys began using another type of visa, the B-1. The B-1 is meant for employees who are traveling to consult with associates, attend training or a convention. But Palmer says the employees were brought in not for meetings, but for full-time jobs. Palmer said the jobs were in "Everything from coding software to testing software to fixing software to installing."

So why would Infosys do this? And what advantage did it give them in the marketplace? Palmer said, "They could outbid everybody or underbid everybody on every contract (because they were paying less.) For example...if I'm gonna pay you $15,000 a year, why would I pay an American or a legal worker $65,000 a year? It makes no - it's just economics." And Palmer says the B-1 workers never paid U.S. taxes because they received their salaries from India.

The Las Vegas Trance Movement

By Michael Blain

The Guardian Express

Trance music is the natural modern extension in the world of electronic dance music of the classical era. Big name producers, mostly residing in Europe, such as Ferry Corsten and M.I.K.E. write music that harkens to musical movements that have long since passed and are still yet to come. Trance, in many cases, includes long, arpeggiated, synthesizer portions of notation that are very reminiscent of a large movement in a classical piece. Some believe that if Mozart were alive today, he would undoubtedly be composing trance music. In Las Vegas, much like any other major city in the United States, it is taboo to allow typical club performers to play trance music because most owners will claim that it is either too fast (most trance music is played between 136 to 140 beats per minute or above) or does not draw enough of a crowd from the droves of non-music-savvy tourists. The only glaring exceptions to this rule are international performers that play at clubs such as Marquee in the Cosmopolitan and Lavo in the Palazzo, who are allowed to play trance music because they still draw large crowds, but are still somewhat restricted by overall crowd reaction and the pressure to appease the champagne-popping big spenders who keep the clubs in business.

The Las Vegas Trance Movement, founded by Shane "Shane Ocean" Fergusson, is a significant attempt to shift the local focus of dance music fans back to the form of music that has been the primary driving force behind electronic music, globally, for decades. He says, "Without trance music, so many other genres of music would currently be years behind where they are now. Pop music such as Britney Spears, and even legendary rock bands such as Radiohead, have been implementing trance into their songs and albums for years. Most people don't even realize that they are already fans of trance even when they claim that they have never heard of it before. The Las Vegas Trance Movement isn't about money or prestige for the artists involved; it is about a distinctive movement to embrace a form of music that is all about love and unity through consciousness. Europe has been infatuated with the beauty of trance for a very long time and it is about time that the United States opened their eyes and ears to what this music is all about." This movement is not just making whispers on the streets of Las Vegas. Even Bryan Kearney, an internationally respected trance music producer and performer from Ireland, gave support to the Las Vegas Trance Movement on his radio show that is broadcast in several hundred countries across the world. He said, "I want to give a shout out to the Las Vegas Trance Movement, it is wonderful to see things like that happening over in the United States and best of luck to everyone involved." The main event currently being sponsored by the Las Vegas Trance Movement is called Trance Arson and is held every Thursday night at Premier Nightclub located at 3015 E. Fremont St.

Zimmerman is a Democrat

By Randy Rose
The Guardian Express

I am perplexed! Why are the Democrats blaming the Republicans when it was a racist Democrat who pulled the trigger? I guess it's because the Democrats are so good at creating a problem and then blaming it on the Republicans. The fact that the Democrats keep calling the Republicans "racists," is a prime example of misdirection when the fact is the Democrats are the true racists as evidenced by their actions. Abortion was originally pushed by Democrats in an effort to kill Black babies in their mothers' wombs. Democrats were against Civil Rights and even filibustered against the bill in the Senate in 1964. They were against the Republicans who tried to end slavery. Democrats were members of the KKK and it was one of their leaders who lead the fight against Civil Rights that the Republicans had to force through even when the President refused to sign the Civil Rights Bill. President Lincoln was a Republican but the Democrats will never admit that fact. Today, the racism in the Democratic Party is alive and well as evidenced by Hilary Clinton when she called Joe Lieberman a "Jew Bastard." The left also called Herman Cain the N word; and even a CNN news anchor used the N word on live TV a few weeks ago but nobody is complaining because when a Democrat says a racist remark, it's ok. The Democrats called the TEA Party racist and violent, but when I attended their gatherings I saw Blacks, Whites, Hispanics and Asians all together and it was a love fest. The only violence I noticed was the Harry Reid supporters throwing eggs at the TEA Party bus. The Democrats then came up with the Occupy movement where there was violence, rape, racism, police action and hate and yet the protester was lauded as Time Magazine's Person of the Year. Republicans are not racists. There are many Black Republicans but the Democrats hate them and can be racist against Black Republicans.

Keep in mind that when you hear the Democrats blaming the Republicans, it is the Democrats deflecting their own actions. Here are more examples of Democrat racism: In 1898 in Wilmington, N.C. Democrats murdered Black Republicans; In 1922, Democrats filibustered the Republicans who tried to make lynching Blacks a criminal offense; FDR nominated KKK Klansman, Hugo Black, to the Supreme Court; The Republican President, Dwight Eisenhower, sent troops to ensure that schools in Little Rock, Arkansas were desegregated and ordered the complete desegregation of the military; Democrat, George Wallace, stood in the doorway of an Alabama school to keep Black children from entering; Democrat, Bull Conner, turned water hoses on those who were marching for Civil Rights. The fact that 90% of Blacks are Democrats, means they should have a lot of Black leaders in the leadership; however, White Democrats in liberal districts will not vote for a Black candidate. There are only 5 Black Democrats in the House representing White districts. The (See "Democrat" page 8)

North Korea: Failure To Launch

By Stephanie Kutner
The Guardian Express

The U.N. Has canceled food aid to North Korea and threatened it with more sanctions after Kim Jong Un failed to launch the Unha-3 rocket in Pyongyang on Friday, April 13th. Two minutes after lift-off, the rocket reportedly exploded mid-flight and plunged into the Yellow Sea between mainland China and the Korean Peninsula. Many have condemned the alleged "attempt to put a weather satellite in orbit" as in fact, a ballistic missile test; the implication being that North Korea's eventual objective would be to launch a nuclear warhead at the U.S.

Backlash has been heard around the world from the leaders of the G8 to the U.N. Security Council to top American officials, who have widely deemed it a provocative action which violated international law. "We will continue to keep the pressure on them and they'll continue to isolate themselves until they take a different path," President Barack Obama said in an interview with Telemundo. At the time of the long-range test in Pyongyang, state television was broadcasting a video of popular folk tunes. In the wake of Kim Jong-il's death last December, his son, Kim Jong-un has been appointed "first chairman" of the country's top decision-making body, the National Defense Commission.

In the high profile week celebrating Kim Jong Un's grandfather and founder of the state, Kim Il-sung's centenary, this launch is an embarrassment. However, Kim Jon Un, in his first public speech since rising to power, spoke of a strong state, and called for "a push to final victory." Soldiers paraded during the speech as thousands of civilians waved artificial pink flowers to commemorate their fallen leaders.

For the leaders of the state there is an urgent need to present a strong, able front to the North Korean people. According to the C.I.A., North Korea has a 1.2 million member military, with a population of 23 million (many of whom are malnourished) and an economy with an annual $40 billion in purchasing power parity terms (how much money would be needed to purchase the same goods and services in two countries, and uses that to calculate an implicit foreign exchange rate.) The world has taken note of what one of the most sanctioned nations on the planet can still manage to attempt, however blundered this trial run may have been.

Machete Victim Speaks Out

By Collette Bender

Maria Del Carmen Gomez, 53, victim of an alleged machete attack by her ex-boyfriend, Armando Vergara-Martinez, 49, spoke Monday in an effort to raise awareness and spare others the suffering she has endured. "I can't do so many things...this is like a nightmare. I'm frustrated because I can't do anything by myself." Ms. Gomez's hands are bound in bandages after the March 21 attack left them severed. Though they have been re-attached and her other wounds treated, doctors estimate months will be required for Ms. Gomez to heal completely. An altercation in the parking lot of a Green Valley Grocery at East Craig Road and North Fifth Street ended when police, responding to a call about a stabbing, discovered the bleeding couple lying on a sidewalk, just feet away from an 18-inch machete. Ms. Gomez suffered wounds to her scalp in addition to the loss of both her hands at the wrists. Mr. Vergara-Martinez sustained a neck wound. While still under treatment at University Medical Center, he was arrested several days after the incident. No motive has been publicly stated for the attack. Mr. Vergara-Martinez has been charged with attempted first-degree murder with a deadly weapon. He is currently being held at the Clark County Detention Center on $150,000 bail. If convicted, he could face 20 years in prison. Ms. Gomez hopes that her experience will inspire others to do what's best for them and escape abusive or violent situations. "Whoever is violent, man or woman, stay away from them. Just walk away or finish or whatever but don't stay there."

HIV/AIDS Patients Get a Boost in Nevada

By Kelly J. Newson

The Guardian Express

Many people in Nevada are living with HIV/AIDS and many can't afford the services and care that are needed to fight the disease, so they end up dying without even knowing that they could have received the proper care and medicine. Now that will soon change for Nevadans because Senator Reid (D-NV) has recently announced two grants for combating the disease and helping those living with it. The first grant (totaling $8,436,894) will go to the Nevada Department of Human Resources and the second ($921,234) will go to the University Medical Center of Southern Nevada. With this money, these institutions will have the necessary resources to provide services for their patients as well as to strengthen the services they already provide.

only Blacks who have made it to high office are Clarence Thomas of the Supreme Court (the Democrats tried hard to stop him), Colin Powell, Secretary of State, and Condoleezza Rice... all Republicans.

Here’s the reality: there are racists in both parties. But, there are a lot more of them in the Democratic Party and there always have been. Ironically, Democrats have managed to use the GOP’s belief in a colorblind America against us. Because so many Democrats have no problem with using racial discrimination for political purposes, they’ll support policies like reparations, Affirmative Action, and racial quotas that Republicans simply won’t. Then they deftly distort and exploit incidents like the Katrina rescue efforts and Bill Bennett’s condemnation of the idea that black babies could be aborted to reduce the crime rate, to convince black Americans that the GOP hates black Americans.

This is all despite the fact that for a large number of black Americans, the GOP is a much better fit than the Democratic Party. The GOP is the party that’s friendly to religion, anti-abortion, against gay marriage, tough on crime, and for low taxes and school vouchers. Yet, so many Black Americans have been deceived into sticking with the Democrats even though the Democrats do so many things that are harmful to our country as a whole and to Black Americans in particular. That’s why if you’re a Black American who thinks the GOP better represents your views than the Democratic Party, then it’s time to join the Republican Party. Don’t let the Democrats lie to you and tell you that the GOP is full of racists, especially when there are so many distinguished black Americans out there who can tell you otherwise.

Restore America Now

an advertorial By Collette Bender

Candidate Herb Peters wants to open a dialogue with the constituents of the First Congressional District, and with the constituents of the country at large. “Opening question: What do you think about when you vote? How do you choose?” Those are not idle questions; Herb Peters is a proponent of individual liberty and personal responsibility, the concepts he would like to share with the American people. To this end, he has constructed his website, titled “Congress 101,” with “the idea of a

lege course, and learning what the government is doing to you.” Self study is a matter of great importance to Mr. Peters, who is knowledgeable about, and can discuss in great depth, historical situations whose lessons can be brought to bear on the state of the American economy government. At the moment, his concern is largely for the economy and his laser focus on what he considers the nation’s most important issue has led him to present an eye-opening perspective on the national debt, government spending, and banking fraud. One of his main concerns is the potential for “German-type hyperinflation,” referring to a period from 1921 to 1924 in Germany when the value of the Deutsche Mark fell until one gold Mark was worth as much as one trillion paper Marks. The period of hyperinflation ended with much of the citizens’ wealth lost, and a new currency had to be introduced to stabilize the economy. He hearkens to that disaster with a warning for the present, citing the value of the U.S. Dollar between 1918 and today. “The buying power of one dollar today versus 1918 is [less than] eight cents.” Not content to simply point out the issues, Mr. Peters has a vision. His website is a starting point for sharing it; and the numerous links on the pages point to statistics, analyses, and the Declaration of Independence. All are relevant and present a cohesive argument in his favor. Mr. Peters is interested in getting people to think about the place the government is afforded in everyday life: do you believe Social Security will be there for you?” To end the issues of rampant unemployment and high reliance on government services, he advises the end of welfare and a limit of two weeks for unemployment compensation, in order to end the practice of “paying people for not working.” His recommendations include abolishment of the minimum wage and other detrimental regulations which prevent citizens from being able to find or create jobs in their communities. In place of government programs and entities to ensure the well-being of constituents, Mr. Peters believes a balanced budget, combined with the power of citizens donating to Churches and Private Charities, will serve to encourage productivity and self-reliance. Unlike other calls to “restore” the United States, Mr. Peters’ call is focused almost squarely on responsibility: individual responsibility to one’s self, one’s community, and one’s nation. He calls for less government, not more, and for the government to spend less money and resources attempting to control or coddle the constituency of the United States. On his website, he states, “This vision was

It Ain't Funny

By Greg Acuna

The Guardian Express

I think when I was asked to write for The Guardian Express there was the expectation that as a writer of political satire, the columns I would pen for the fledgling newspaper would be humorous. Truth is I haven't been in a comic mood...I've been job hunting. Nothing like the pain of looking for employment in the middle of...what are we in the middle of? Is it still a recession? A recovery? Well, I can't speak for the economy but it's put me in the middle of a serious depression. How about you? To make matters worse, yesterday I was compelled to make a $205 contribution to the government after a seven month battle over a minor traffic violation. Well, it was a battle for me...surely the court system didn't even register mild irritation.

You see back in November of last year I was driving leisurely around the Vegas Valley, house hunting. As my GPS explained to me that I would have to turn in one hundred feet, I was surprised to see flashing blue lights behind me. Of course my first reaction was that cold sweat one gets when facing an encounter with a man with a gun. My next reaction was to pull over calmly, thinking the policeman was either getting ready to speed by me in search of criminals in the act doing society bodily harm or that there must be have been some kind of mistake.

The crew cut LVPD officer explained to that he clocked me going 44 in a 25 mph zone. I was shocked, dismayed. I smiled, I explained, I begged...I finally got a ticket for the reduced charge of going 1 to 10 miles over the posted speed limit. Yes, I could have paid the fine, gone to traffic school and it over with quickly, but alas, I did not know the labyrinth I was entering.

The ticket ordered me to appear six weeks later at the courthouse. I appeared on time, took a number and waited...and waited...and waited. During my wait, I started wondering if something was wrong. There was something strange about the waiting area. I was the only "Caucasian." I joke you not. I spent over an hour there and not another white face appeared on our side of the thick glass lined room. I don't know if people of color are really targeted that much more for traffic violations or if there is another explanation, but it's definitely a disturbing question.

Once my number was called, I was told to go to one of the windows outside a courtroom. "Hooray!" I thought. I was going to settle it once and for all; but no, I was told to return in two weeks. Two weeks later I was in front of the judge thinking finally I would have it all behind me, but after a quick and cryptic conversation with the District Attorney, I was told I needed to return again...almost five months later. Talk about having something hang over you for a while!

Yesterday I went to court. The DA offered to reduce the ticket to "Illegal Parking" with no points and no traffic school. I marveled at the wisdom of the situation and figured I was being fined for parking my rear-end in the courthouse, wasting everyone's time...especially my own. Perhaps paying the fine would be the best thing for me. A reminder to avoid courtrooms at all costs.

I took the deal, let them swipe one of my credit cards that hasn't already reached it limit and hurried outside to breathe the air of freedom. I'd survived. On my drive home I had to admit that perhaps the system was purposely painful...my speedometer never crossed the posted limit.

Station Casinos: Largest Violator of Labor Law in History of Nevada

By Albert Angulo

The Guardian Express

On September 22, National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) Administrative Law Judge Geoffrey Carter found more violations of federal law by Station Casinos than in any previous case against a Nevada gaming company. (Update: the company has appealed the decision.) The judge has recommended that Station be ordered to cease and desist from its wide-ranging violations of federal law. His decision unveils the lie that Station has told employees and the press: that it has "at all times complied with the law." Now the truth is out.

Judge Carter found that Station committed 87 separate unfair labor practices in its war against its employees' organizing campaign with Culinary Workers Union Local 226 and Bartenders Union Local 165. The unfair labor practices run the whole gamut of illegal conduct by employers to prevent organizing. It fired, disciplined, threatened, interrogated, offered bribes (promised benefits), and spied on its employees who were organizing for the union. It adopted rules designed to prevent employees from communicating with one another about the union. It told them that it would be futile for them to select the union to represent them.

This decision followed weeks of trial from tober 2010 to May 2011. Station failed to call a single witness in its defense. Instead, it tried to get the judge to dismiss the complaint on procedural grounds having to do with its claim that the union did not give it all the information it subpoenaed for trial. The judge rejected this request. He also rejected Station's request to be paid its litigation costs over the subpoena issues.

Station Casinos' anti-union campaign has overwhelmingly affected Latino workers. While the company claims 26% of its workforce is Latino or Hispanic, 78% of the 87 labor law violations found by Judge Carter involve Latino workers. Moreover, eight of the ten worker organizers the company has fired so far are Latino. Three have been brought back to work after charges were filed with the NLRB.

STARTING A BUSINESS Planning out your Business - Part 2

By W.W. Mayes

The Guardian Express

It is my hope for those of you currently in business or looking to start a business, that the information I provide will be of assistance to you. For those of you with no interest in starting a business, maybe reading this will give you a greater appreciation for those who do take the risk.

The real value of creating a business plan is not having the finished product; rather, the value lies in the process of researching and thinking about your business in a systematic way. The act of planning helps you to think things through thoroughly, study and research if you are not sure of the facts, and look at your ideas critically. It takes time now, but avoids costly, perhaps disastrous, mistakes later.

Last week we began the discussion of how to set company goals and objectives. I explained that goals are destinations—where you want your business to be. This is the big picture for the next 3 to 5 years. Objectives are progress markers along the way toward goal achievement. Objectives are your measuring sticks to see if you are staying on track.

Let's say that your business needed to achieve a monthly revenue stream that would compute to 10 million in annual revenue within 36 months. To figure out how to achieve this goal you would need to break it down into bite-sized pieces called "objectives." To determine what those objectives should be, you must pull together some facts such as your market size, the product or service price to your end user, competitive situation in the market, market need and value of your product or service, development cost, personnel cost, overall costs and expenses, and many more things.

To simplify this we will say that you have a product that is needed and desired by your market. Let's say that your product brings in a monthly revenue from each customer site of $1,300 and that this is a fair and acceptable price in your market. We will estimate that your net revenue after payroll and expenses sits at 65 percent. (Net revenue is different from your net. We will cover business accounting at another time.) If I take 65 percent of $1,300 I have a net of $845 for each monthly customer payment. This tells me that the company will make net revenue of $10,140 per paying customer site. If you divide your objective of 10 million by $10,140 you now know that you will need to have 987 client sites under contract in order to achieve your goal.

Now you can go to work figuring out what your objectives need to be over the next 36 months. You know that you have 36 months to contract 987 clients. Let's say that you have a possible customer base of 30,000. This tells you that you must have contracted 3.3 percent of your market place in 36 months. How do you do this? The answer is simple yet complex. There will always be variables depending on the market you are involved in, the economic stability at the current time, and many other conditions but there are certain things that run true no matter what business you are in.

I hope that you can now see that before you can start working on your goals and objectives it is imperative that you have done your homework. You should have, by this point, completed your primary and secondary market research, determined the economic facts about your industry such as:

- What is the total size of your market?
- What percent share of the market will you have? (This is important only if you think you will be a major factor in the market.) Current demand in target market.
- Trends in target market—growth trends, trends in consumer preferences, and trends in product development.
- Growth potential and opportunity for a business of your size.
- What barriers do you face in entering this market with your new company? (Some typical barriers are: high capital costs, high production costs, high marketing costs, consumer acceptance and brand recognition, training and skills, unique technology and patents, unions, shipping costs, tariff barriers and quotas.)
- And of course, how will you overcome the barriers?
- How could the following affect your company: change in technology, change in government regulations, change in the economy, and change in your industry?

Let's assume that you have done your homework so that you can lay out your goals and objectives using the numbers stated previously in this article. How do you determine what your objectives need to be so that you can reach your goal in 36 months? The first thing you must understand is that our objectives will have several layers to them.

Let's say that your objective by month three is to have ten contracted customers. You must now figure out what it will take to achieve this objective in your first three months of operation. How many sales people will you need to have on staff to achieve this? How many phone lines and what other support will you need?

So now this objective might be written as follows: "Within the first thirty days of being in business, we will have ten phone lines set up with a computerized voice-mail system, eight integrated work stations that are functioning effectively with our servers, hired and trained three sales persons, and hired a ready-to-go support technician. Having done this, we will have contracted at least ten customers to use our product and services.

Now you have some meat to bite into. You can focus on what must be done to achieve your objective that is a stepping stone to your goal.

Meet William A. James, Real Estate Investor

By Isabelle Guzman

Mr. James was born and raised in Dominica, a little island in the Caribbean. He emigrated in the U.S. in 1978 and graduated from San Jose State University in 1986, after successfully completing a program in aeronautics with a maintenance specialization. After his student career, he started a thirty-year-long career working for different airlines, climbing the ladder to finally, happily, land in Las Vegas in a maintenance management position. In 2008, the stress level of this position pushed him to make the choice of re-orienting his career to find a job that could generate the same range of income but with a lower level of stress. It was a tough decision, since he'd given more than thirty years to his passion for airplanes; nevertheless, he decided to take a chance and pursue a goal with his second passion: real estate.

Mr. James was already setting up shop in this industry by doing real estate investment, home studies and attending real estate investing seminars while he was still with his career in the airlines. In fact, his last position as a director of induction and heavy maintenance in the aeronautics industry helped to make him the successful business man he is today. In this position, he was involved in negotiations with the banks for acquiring large assets by evaluating airplanes to determine what needed to be done in order to make them safe and suitable for passenger services. He then was in charge of managing the project to get the work done. The knowledge and experience he acquired through fulfilling these tasks he easily applied to the real estate field.

Mr. James likes to see his business as a "one stop shop" in real estate, offering all kinds of real estate services from buying and selling properties, to referrals for credit repair and mortgage services. He is also a broker for promissory notes. While performing all of these services, he always keeps the focus on the client. He never hesitates to go outside the box and use creative strategies to solve real estate situations; for example, reverse short sales or residential back flips. "I put together lucrative real estate deals so that: 1. My clients benefit with real solutions for their real estate situations, and 2. My money partners make consistent high rates of returns safely and securely" James told The Guardian Express during a phone interview.

Clients seeking services with Mr. James consist of individuals or organizations that need to address a real estate issue or fulfill a need. For example, an individual needing to sell a house quickly because of one of what is known in the industry as the 4D's: Disaster, Disease, Divorce and Death or investors and landlords seeking to buy a property in order to make a profitable investment. He also helps people who simply need to find a place to call home, find a property that satisfies their needs. JPI, James Property Investors LLC, also deals with institutions like banks buying pools of foreclosed homes or non-performing notes.

In order to be able to offer these services to his clients, Mr. James relies on private money partners.

"I use cash from my partners who are just everyday people like you and me, to buy real estate. I typically work with people who are tired of the volatility of the stock market, are frustrated with the meager returns in their CDs IRAs and mutual funds. I provide safe, secure opportunities in real estate for these everyday people to get their money working hard for them instead of the other way around." James said.

Mr. William A. James is passionate about real estate investment and solutions and is determined to share his passion with his clients and investors by offering them his expertise and help in handling their different real estate situations.

Our Polluted Public Drinking Water

By Dr. Mark Baxter

The Guardian Express

As conscientious, environmentally aware individuals, we wouldn't knowingly pollute our environment. We are attentive to reducing our "footprint" on the environment and participate in recycling, utilize re-usable bags when shopping, and engage in other actions in order to protect our environment. Yet many of us still pollute our environment regularly, without even realizing it.

One of the largest category of pollutants being released into our water supply is prescription drugs (Doro-on, A. -2011- Risk Assessment for Water Infrastructure Safety and Security). Most prescription drugs are eventually excreted from the body and wind up in our sewer system. During the purification process, many of these drugs do not break down and wind up being discharged into our creeks, rivers and lakes, eventually finding themselves in our water table and drinking water supply. This also is true for those on septic systems.

Antidepressants and mood stabilizers as well as many other classes of drugs wind up being inadvertently discharged into our water supply. If you drink water from any public water system without the water undergoing additional filtration (such as by distillation or reverse osmosis), you are probably exposing yourself to these pollutants. These drugs when ingested can cause cancer another physical disorders, including mental, emotional and behavioral disorders. Children's brains are particularly vulnerable to the effects of these pollutants.

In addition, if you are taking prescription medication, you are undoubtedly contributing to the pollution of our water supply. I certainly am NOT suggesting that anybody decrease or stop taking the medication that their physician has prescribed for them without obtaining their doctor's permission. However, I AM saying that those who do everything possible to enhance their physical, mental and emotional health in order to minimize their use of prescription medications are not only contributing to their own health, but to the health of the environment as well.

This also illustrates why I instruct all of my patients to "buy a filter, or be a filter". Either you purchase a water distiller or reverse osmosis machine (which are far more cost-effective over the long run, and easier on the environment, than using bottled water) to filter and purify your drinking water, or your liver and kidneys will wind filtering and purifying that water (but not before the drugs have adversely affected your health).

So the action steps I am recommending are that you insure that you drink only purified water and other beverages made with purified water. I am also advocating that you adopt healthy diets and lifestyle choices in order to optimize your health and minimize your chances of needing prescription medication. In future issues I will discuss more details about how to do that.

Which Came First...The Chicken or The Egg?

By Jo Rooks

The Guardian Express

There are theories that we are what we think, that our thoughts determine our life path, and that if we think "correctly" we can manifest our life to be exactly how we want it. I am by no means saying this theory is correct or incorrect. I don't know if thoughts can manifest our life path or if our life path manifests our thoughts. It's kind of like the question, "Which came first, the chicken or the egg?" Who knows? It's not like we can test the theory. Let's say I am thinking certain thoughts and it manifests...I can't exactly "go back" and see if the same thing manifests if I'm not thinking the thoughts. I do know that things seem to go better when I keep my thoughts positive. When I believe the best in others, I seem to feel better and I'm happier. When I try to find something positive in each situation and think everything happens for a reason, life seems to go more smoothly. So in this sense, my thoughts manifest a positive outlook on life, creating a personal happiness. Believe me... I am not perfect at this! I know that if I am in a negative mood, there is nothing worse than a very positive person because they make "miserable me" crazy! Seriously, misery loves company, not positivity! And I was always annoyed by those overly positive people; you know... the ones who exuberantly use words like "super" no matter what the situation. I usually label them as "fake," but who am I to judge? There's always the theory of "fake it until you make it" and maybe that's what they are doing or maybe they aren't being fake at all. Misery does love company; but really, who wants to be around a bunch of miserable people? I have tried manifesting through thought. I have affirmed numerous times a day that I am at a certain weight. It is a bit hard to believe when I step on the scale in the morning and it shows 20 pounds heavier than my affirmation but I continue to affirm this just in case it happens to work!

My husband read about a man who continually used the expression, "I would give my right arm for my daughter to have the opportunity to..." and as it turned out, the man had an accident and actually did lose his right arm and his daughter did get the opportunity. Which came first, the chicken or the egg here? Did this man's use of the expression manifest the positive opportunity for his daughter and the accident or would his daughter have gotten the opportunity and the accident have happened even if he hadn't used that expression? Again, we can't "rewind" and try it again without the expression/thought to see what would happen. After reading this, my husband said he was going to quit using the expression "that burns my ass" when something upset him because he didn't want it to become literal. I agreed and told him I was going to say "that burns the fat right off my ass" instead, just in case there was something to this!

We got to talking about other negative expressions that we use without thinking of what we are actually saying and how we can change them just in case. For instance, "That makes my skin crawl," will be changed to "That makes my skin smooth," or, "That really pisses me off," now will become "That really teaches me patience." "That makes my stomach turn," changes to, "That makes my stomach flat and firm." Instead of, "That makes me freaking crazy," will be, "That makes me freaking wealthy!"

I am not one-hundred-percent positive that our thoughts determine our destiny, and I don't have one-hundred-percent faith in my choice of thoughts or that I actually know what I want my destiny to be. I am not sure I am the greatest navigator for a trip as big as my life path! I am going to continue to practice being more positive than negative, but I am going to reserve a time or two to have a few negative moments because to be truthful, it just feels good once in a while. I am going to choose positivity with things that develop in my life and continue to believe everything happens for a reason. However, I am personally going to leave my life path to divine guidance, trusting in a power bigger than myself and continuing with daily affirmations and gratitude for abundance of health, wealth, happiness and inner peace.

Summer Fitness

By Kendle Walters

The Guardian Express

Summer is right around the corner, and in Las Vegas, this usually means wearing less clothing... a lot less clothing. There are some quick, effective ways to get in shape before summer arrives that don't require spending all day in the gym and eating only skimpy salads.

Exercise can be a daunting task for many people, yet the thought of baring almost all in a swimsuit can be motivation enough to get them to jump on the treadmill and start pumping some iron. Regardless of the motivation, exercising and eating right can be rewarding and provide far more benefits than just looking better in swimwear.

According to the Mayo Clinic, regular exercise helps to control weight and combat health conditions and diseases. Even moderate exercise burns calories and aids in regulating weight. Physical activity raises the good cholesterol (HDL) and helps lower the bad cholesterol (LDL), no matter what your current weight is. This helps reduce the risk for heart disease and stroke. Exercise has also been credited with reducing the risk for certain types of cancers and Type II diabetes.

Losing weight through diet and exercise is a process that takes time. The process can be expedited however, by safely making dietary changes and increasing your level of physical activity.

One pound of fat is equal to 3500 calories, so to lose a pound a week, a person must reduce their caloric intake by 500 a day. Omitting 500 calories a day from your diet can be as simple as drinking water with meals instead of juice or soda. A large soda can run over 300 calories and an eight ounce glass of orange juice is approximately 140 calories.

To improve health and maintain weight loss, the Center for Disease Control and Prevention recommends adults get at least 150 minutes a week of moderate-intensity exercise, but they say to use caution if you have been inactive for a while. Starting with low to moderate intensity activities and working your way up to vigorous exercise is advised.

Former National Physique Committee bodybuilder and Las Vegas resident, Joseph Vara, recommends doing at least 30-45 minutes of high-intensity cardio per day to get in shape in time for summer. Examples of high-intensity aerobic exercise include jogging, swimming laps, and playing basketball. He said that you don't have to have a gym membership to achieve a healthy, toned body. Running, doing push-ups, pull-ups, and jumping jacks, are all effective exercises that can be done anytime and anywhere. "Anything to get your heart rate up and break a sweat is good," he said.

For people who want to shed extra pounds quickly and augment their results, Vara suggests consuming at least 1 gram of protein per pound of body weight, lowering carbohydrate consumption significantly, drinking only water and cutting sodium from their diets.

"Any person who does these things I think will see a drastic decrease in body weight," Vara said.

According to Vara, timing is everything when it comes to successful dieting. He said carbohy drates should be non-glycemic (think brown rice, wheat bread, yams) and consumed in the morning. Eating after 6 p.m. is also a no-no in his book. "Your body is like a machine, it's used to a routine. If you train your body to eat at the same times everyday, your body is going to regulate itself a lot better."

He said portion control is critical and that a healthy portion would be a 4 oz chicken breast and approximately 4-5 ounces of broccoli.

"Ultimately, exercise is only about one-third of what it takes to get in shape," Vara said. "The other two-thirds is totally your diet."

If consuming only chicken and broccoli sounds a little too rigid for you, there is hope. Vara suggests rewarding yourself with a "cheat meal" once a week, where you can eat anything you want-even a double cheeseburger and fries.

For less than an hour a day of exercising and replacing unhealthy foods with nutritious choices, a person can reap the health benefits that diet and exercise have to offer. And don't forget the aesthetic rewards too- looking better in a swimsuit and shorts just in time for summer.

Long Live Rockabilly: Viva Las Vegas 15

By Frankie Tease
The Guardian Express

Band after band came onstage throughout the 15th annual, four-day Rockabilly Weekend held every year at the Orleans Hotel & Casino on Easter Weekend. There were eight stages in all and shows within shows continuously. Bands played tribute to the great inventors of Rock N' Roll of the 1950's decade. If the solid tribute wasn't enough, actual guitar and Rock N' Roll legends also graced the stage in large numbers. Duane Eddy and The Ventures (ie: Nokie Edwards, Don Wilson, Gerry McGee) were among the most anticipated acts at Viva Las Vegas 15.

Inside stages held performances day and night for four-day-pass holders who bought ahead; and the one-day Car Show and Concert was open to day-of purchasers and was well attended. Cars, vendors, pin-up girls such as Musuimi Max, and music were presented outdoors in front of a huge area at the Orleans Arena, starting at 9am and continuing until well after 8pm. The weather was absolutely perfect for the Saturday show. Many local Las Vegas celebrities were spotted including comedian-impressionist, Robert Nash.

Topping the indoor stages came two UK sensations and first-timers to the Rockabilly Weekender: The Jive Aces, and Si Cranstoun. Highly anticipated return Viva acts included Deke Dickerson, Big Sandy, The Big Six, and The Space Cadets. There were acts from Sweden, Brazil, and the UK, as well as bands from the good ole' U.S. of A., performing throughout the Rockabilly Weekender.

The VLV15 fashion show displayed the "preserve and create from the past" aspect of the Rockabilly lifestyle at a well-attended Friday 1pm show. The tribute to Mamie Van Doren was spectacularly carried out by returning host, Debbie Dagger.

One of the coveted titles to come out of Viva Las Vegas Rockabilly Weekender is the Burlesque Competition's 1st Place, or Miss Viva Las Vegas. Entrants must apply before December of the previous year and then online voting brings finalists to perform for live audiences who choose their winner. This year's title was won by a Chicago entrant named "Jeez Loueez."

Attendees came from as far away as France, Italy, Germany, England, and Sweden. The staff at the Orleans gushed about loving the annual event, one bartender even going so far as to say, "This is my Wrestle-Mania."

Outdoor events included the vintage car show on Saturday, two vintage swimsuit contests, and the ongoing pool party all four days with record hops and hula girls. Indoor alternative events included "Burlesque Bingo" (she strips, you win), Viva Las Bowling, Pin-up Styling Classes, Vintage Vendors, Jive Dance Classes with Miss Wolff, and continuous jive dancing in the ballrooms to spectacular record hops playing the oldest and the newest.

That's what's amazing about the Viva Las Vegas Rockabilly Weekend: Not only will you see and hear quality rock n' roll that is being made today, but you also get to experience the origins of rock. It isn't dead, thanks to people like organizer Tom Ingram and all the bands, vendors, and attendees that make this one of the richest vintage experiences that you could ever have. Even the Orleans Hotel played pre-1963 music only, because, hey- it was Viva Las Vegas!

According to the Organizer, Tom Ingram, Viva Las Vegas Rockabilly Weekend 15 brought in 8,500 pre-paid wristband holders, 3000 of which were International. 12 music acts were International. The car show had 800 pre-1963 cars, and 15,000 people attended. Tickets go on sale for 2013 starting May 31st.

VLV15 was held at the Orleans Hotel April 5-8 of 2012. VLV16 will be held at the Orleans Hotel March 28-31, 2013. VivaLasVegas.net, Miss-FrankieTease.com

PURSUING LORD STANLEY'S CUP

By Art Stevens

The Guardian Express

As I write, the NHL playoffs are barely underway. I'll try to do a brief rundown on each of the opening match-ups. For those of you who are already hockey nuts like me, I don't have to say anything about the intensity level and the overall quality of NHL playoff hockey. If you haven't experienced it in the past, do yourself a favor. Watch. Root for your favorite team, or if you don't have one, pick one out, put on their games, and root for them. Either way, you will see 60 minutes of the fastest, hardest-fought, and toughest hockey in the world.

There are 30 teams in the National Hockey League. There are 15 teams in the Eastern Conference and 15 in the Western Conference. The 8 teams with the best record in each conference make it into the playoffs. In the first series of the playoffs, the first team to win four games out of a possible seven will be the winner of that series and move on to the second round. That leaves 4 teams in each conference. The same formula applies to the next series (the semi finals.) The winners of that series then play for the coveted Lord Stanley Cup, also in a best of 7 series.

For those of you who are already hockey fans, I apologize for all of that. Lately, when I have brought up the NHL and the Stanley Cup, I have seen so many blank stares, that I thought that just possibly I might steer some good sports fans to some of the best action and competition in the sports world.

In the Eastern Conference: The NEW YORK RANGERS are hosting the OTTAWA SENATORS in the first round, and at this moment the series is tied at one game each. They have, arguably, the top goalie in the league in Henrik Lundqvist. I like the Rangers to move on, even though the home ice advantage has shifted to Ottawa. Everyone (except their fans of course)

seem to hate the PITTSBURGH PENGUINS, and right now they are down 2 games to none to the PHILADELPHIA FLYERS, and headed to Philly for the next 3. I still think they will come back and win in 7. The NEW JERSEY DEVILS entertain the FLORIDA PANTHERS. The Panthers are a good, young team, but the Devils are coming off a 6-game winning streak to end the regular season, and that, along with veteran goalie Martin Brodeur, should be enough to carry them through to the next round. The WASHINGTON CAPITALS, with their superstar Alexander Ovechkin play the big, bad, BOSTON BRUINS. The Caps have been up and down all year. The BOSTON BRUINS are always one of the toughest teams in the NHL. They finished the season with a 6-1-1 record. Moments ago, the Caps picked up a double overtime victory in game 2 to even up the series at 1-1. I like the Beantowners in 6. In the Western Conference: I have to go with the CHICAGO BLACKHAWKS over the PHOENIX COYOTES. This is a tough series. Patrick Sharp and Marian Hossa could make the difference. I look for the VANCOUVER CANUCKS great power play to possibly make the difference against the LOS ANGELES KINGS. The ST. LOUIS BLUES have terrific goaltending, which I think should be enough for them to defeat the SAN JOSE SHARKS in a tough series. The NASHVILLE PREDATORS are young and hungry, but I can't get myself to pick against the DETROIT RED WINGS. They have been too good for too long for me to pick against them. DATE: Nashville just went ahead 2-1 in the series.

I mentioned earlier that if you are either new to hockey, or for whatever reason, don't have a favorite team, that you should pick one- watch- and root. This is a fast and furious game, with the intensity level that only the playoffs can provide. I hope my insight will help you enjoy the games, but hopefully not for financial gain. When it comes to sports gambling, you have just as much of a shot at winning if you base your picks on your favorite uniform color. It's a great game. Enjoy!

Los cargos han sido hecho por una fuente dentro de dicha compañía, un empleado que se atrevía a hablar públicamente del echo: Jay Palmer un asesor principal de la compañía y también el informante que ha sacado a la luz las no tan honradas actividades de la compañía y que han dado como resulta una investigación federal, Palmer alega que la compañía Infosys se ha visto en vuelta en la practica de un trade sistemático de U.S. visas. Palmera dice que lo primero que le llamo la atención fue en un empleado de la India que había visto en los estados unidos muchas veces , un día se le acerco y prácticamente con lágrimas en los ojos le dijo , que se encontraba en el país ilegalmente y que no quería estar aquí por miedo a que lo descubrieran .

Fue cuando Palmera empezó a investigar como Infosys parecía estar colocando un gran numero de trabajadores del corporativo desde las oficinas corporativas en india hasta los estados unidos. Al principio los trabajadores llegaban con H-1 visas que son visas de trabajo para personas especializadas con talentos difíciles de encontrar en los estados unidos, cuando se le pregunto si dichos trabajadores tenían algún talento especial que fuese difícil de encontrar en el país Palmer dijo: "definitivamente no , ni pensarlo , muchos de ellos eran novatos, gente que solo quería venir por venir , quien sea que fuese aceptado para una visa podía venir muchos de ellos ni siquiera era sabían lo que estaban haciendo" entonces cual era el motivo para traer a estas personas cuando puedes contratar personas Americanas que hallan sido entrenados en esa disciplina en particular ? Plamer dijo : nada mas que ahorrar dinero !

Cuando los EE.UU. del Departamento de Estado comenzó a limitar el número de visas H-1B, Según Palmera Infosys comenzó a utilizar otro tipo de visa, B-1. El B-1 que está destinadas para empleados que viajan a asesorar sus socios, asistir a un entrenamiento o una convención. Sin embargo, Palmera dice que los empleados fueron traídos no para las reuniones, sino para trabajo a tiempo completo. año, ¿por qué tengo que pagar un americano o un trabajador legal $ 65,000 al año? No tiene sentido, es pura avaricia. Pero una de las acusaciones más graves de Palmera es que los principales ejecutivos de la empresa no sólo sabía del supuesto fraude, pero querían expandirlo para aumentar las ganancias. Palmera dice que durante una reunión de 2010 en la sede corporativa de Infosys en Bangalore se discutió la práctica con un grupo de ejecutivos, incluyendo un vicepresidente. como portador de una H-1 VISA me considero apto para opinar en el tema y dejeme decirles queridos lectores que es una pena que por la mera avaricia de una empresa no solo se promueva el desempleo en este país sino que se arruinen oportunidades para aquellos que desean hacer las cosas bien , gracias y hasta la proxima Alberto Angulo hola mis queridos lectores, es un placer presentarles mi repaso semanal de las últimas creaciones de Hollywood , ya era tarde el domingo cuando decidí tratar algo nuevo, esta vez compre un boleto para una película de terror, muy diferente a lo que usualmente veo ya que la verdad no disfruto mucho el suspenso, pero en fin quería expandir mi plataforma, y le toco el turno a la película : "la mujer de negro" una historia de suspenso presentada en el 2012 dirigida por James Watkins y escrita por Jane Goldman basada en la novela del mismo nombre de Susan Hills. La estrella de la Daniel Radcliffe mejor conocido por su trabajo como el protagonista de "Harry Potter" de quien la verdad nunca fui un gran fan, hace una presentación un tanto mediocre en esta película , y tal vez fue en si la sombra del joven Mago lo que me impidió disfrutar el show , pero no pude dejar de tener flashbacks de Harry Potter, y me encontré distraído por lo mucho que este Jovenito ha cambiado, la historia no me mantuvo completamente entretenido, si bien no puedo negar que Daniel ha crecido mucho en cuanto a sus habilidades tales se refiere , no olvidemos el buen trabajo que quitadose la ropa en la obra " ecus ", pero Daniel, no eres Jhonny Deep no puedes aspirar a este tipo de películas todavía , creo que el actor esta desesperado por librarse de el encasillamiento de Harry Potter que no esta pensando bien los proyectos que toma. Un joven abogado (Radcliffe) viaja a una remota villa , donde descubre el fantasma de una mujer que aterroriza a los habitantes , locales, pero me fue muy difícil creer que estaba casado y no solo eso sino que tenía un hijo de 4 años, demasiado irreal, aparte la película toma mucho tiempo antes de resolverse el rompe cabezas y cuando finalmente lo hace no hay mucha claridad , el final (que obviamente no voy a revelar) es muy predecible y honestamente me dejó sintiendome como que me acababan de tomar el pelo y un poco molesto. pienso que la película no es el problema en si sino el echo que de que Harry Potter esta 3 metros bajo tierra y Dañe Radcliffe esta buscando maneras de mover su carrera en nuevas direcciones, con su total desnudo frontal por todo el Internet, cantando y bailando en un musical de Broadway y con este proyecto simplemente estaba tratando algo nuevo . pero no considero que ningún espectador deba pagar por verla, así que adivinaron ! mi recomendacion es que no vallan a ver esta película de echo evitenla lo mas que puedan por que solo es una perdida de una hora y 34 minutos de su valioso tiempo, gracias y hasta la proxima Alberto

Su preocupación por los sin voz y los desfavorecidos en los Estados Unidos sonó fuerte y claro. nalar ... "independientemente de que el candidato demócrata, todos estamos aquí unidos detrás de los principios democráticos básicos que todos se derivan hacia abajo para hacer que la economía mejor, y lo que es mejor para todos, no sólo para unos pocos en la parte superior." En la parte superior "es lo que se podría considerar el Dr. Stephen Frye quien está buscando una elección parlamentaria en el Distrito 3. En su sitio web denominado 25 razones para legalizar las drogas en el www.25reasons.org, el Dr. Frye profundiza en los 25 principales razones por las que cree que debe garantizar la legalización de las drogas. Cuando a punto la pregunta del día el Dr. Frye, responde, "La ambición individual más importante del Partido Demócrata es volver a elegir a Barack Obama para continuar el increíble trabajo que ha hecho por la recuperación de este país de la catástrofe que George W. Bush nos dejó in George HW Bush nos dejó en una depresión grave. George W. Bush nos ha dejado en una gran recesión. Estábamos en una situación desesperada, los graves. El país se está recuperando lentamente. Clinton creó más puestos de trabajo en ocho años que lo que los republicanos crearon en veinte años, durante las administraciones Reagan y Bush. Somos la máquina de trabajo "

El tema unánime que se presentó en la Convención Demócrata del Condado de Clark es uno de esperanza para el pueblo de Nevada. El Partido Demócrata habla del "hombre común" en todos nosotros ... los medios, de cuello azul, el trabajo de la de los dedos-a-la-hueso estadounidense. Para resumir en una frase: El Partido Demócrata del Condado de Clark es el partido que representa a la clase obrera de Nevada con la esperanza de lograr la seguridad en el empleo y una economía fortalecida para toda la población habló de la "diversidad" de las figuras políticas que sea representativa de la fiesta. Comentó que él cree que la diversidad dentro del partido es necesario. "Cree que todos estos candidatos representan la diversidad que es nuestra fiesta y tiene que ser. Creo que es una combinación de educación y la economía que llevará a cabo a los votantes a la pollstragardless de antecedentes de los candidatos. "El Sr. Lieberman se puede encontrar en Facebook en <http://www.facebook.com/people/Sam-Lieberman/648402342>.

Un candidato que ofrece tal diversidad es Steven Brooks, actualmente compitiendo por la reelección a la Asamblea del Estado de Nevada, representación al Distrito 17. Steven Brooks también cree que el principal punto focal para el Partido Demócrata es una plataforma construida sobre la reparación de la educación del país y los problemas de desempleo: "Tenemos que crear puestos de trabajo al estado de Nevada. Con el fin de hacer eso, tenemos que corregir nuestro sistema educativo. Nuestro sistema educativo no está fallando y, en consecuencia, no las empresas o de las empresas a reubicarse en el estado de Nevada hasta que podamos solucionar ese problema. Hay que desmantelar el sistema educativo de Nevada como lo conocemos y poner de nuevo juntos de nuevo en un formato que está funcionando adecuadamente. Nos corresponde a nosotros en la Legislatura del Estado para asegurar que nuestros profesores cuentan con el apoyo que sea necesario para que puedan sobresalir en el aula ".  al fin y al cabo, el objetivo común del Partido Demócrata o el tema es la representación de la clase obrera de América. Es el hombre común o la clase obrera de los Estados Unidos que haya sufrido este país e hizo a este país en lo que es hoy. "Plataforma de Rodríguez" es uno que apoya a la clase obrera de los estadounidenses y sus hijos. El desea devolver el empleo a los residentes de Nevada y de oponerse a la legislación que le roban a nuestro sistema educativo de dinero necesaria para apoyar a los maestros de Nevada. Felipe Rodríguez puede encontrarse en <http://felipefassembly.com>. Ya estaba escuchando un murmullo de mantra del partido. Seguí a través de la multitud y se encontró con un señor llamado Michael Hopper. Me sorprendió por su bastante simple, sin embargo, articular la respuesta a mi pregunta. Muy en serio, sin perder el ritmo, el Sr. Hopper respondió: "Nuestra misión es mejorar este país"; El veterano de los Estados Unidos continuó: "Estoy viendo la guerra sobre las mujeres, la guerra contra los más desfavorecidos. Estoy viendo la guerra contra todos los que no tienen voz. Estas personas aquí están unidos en proporcionar una plataforma para dar voz a los marginados ya todos aquellos que no tienen voz en la lucha contra la oligarquía en la América corporativa que está arrojando a nuestro país. "Desafiando a la victimización de los sin voz, las palabras del Sr. Hopper retumbó en mi cabeza .

El Hombre Común Del Partido

By Lia King

The Guardian Express

Los motores del Partido Demócrata y agitadores se reunieron en el Riviera Hotel & Casino en Sábado, 14 de abril 2012, para la Convención Demócrata del Condado de Clark. Mientras caminaba hacia el enjambre de asistentes ocupados que entran y salen de la colmena principal de la convención, me di cuenta de un rumor muy fuerte de las voces de sus asistentes en la estratosfera de la habitación. Mi instinto inicial fue para ajustarlo a cabo ya que el sonido era caótico y preocupante del todo. Tomar un momento para ajustar, me dejé elaborado por ella en su lugar. En cuanto entre en tándrica al uni-sono con el murmullo de las voces de los asistentes de muchos, me preguntaba lo que iba a descubrir que el mantra colectiva del grupo. ¿Cuál sería el ideal de cohesión más importante que trae un grupo tan diverso de los ciudadanos para ser llamado el Caucus Demócrata del Condado de Clark?

Me encontré con uno de los asistentes a la convención, Frank Masacre. Mi pregunta a este ex-soldado del Cuerpo de Marines y el padre era simple. ¿Qué es lo que consideran que es el Partido Demócrata solo objetivo fundacional más importante? Con una amplia sonrisa, respondió: "Básicamente, el Partido Demócrata es para todo el mundo. Es incluyente, no excluyente. El Partido Demócrata es la igualdad para todos, especialmente a la clase obrera." Después de escuchar las palabras muy elocuentes del Sr. Matanza en apoyo de su partido, me preguntaba si los demás asistentes y de los candidatos que comparan su punto de vista. Deseosos de ver si la percepción del Sr. Masacre también fue en las mentes de los candidatos del partido, fui en busca de Felipe Rodríguez, que se está ejecutando actualmente para la Asamblea Estatal por el Distrito 19. Yo presente la misma pregunta. Rodríguez respondió: "Podemos tener diferentes creencias personales. Podemos tener diferentes valores personales aquí y allá. Pero, (Ver "Partido" pagina 2)
